

COMPLAINTS PROCEDURE

SECTION ONE – CHANGE CONTROL

On an ongoing basis, these procedures will require amendment to reflect current working practice. Amendments to these procedures must be approved a Director.

Where changes are made, the new version of the procedures will be renamed incorporating the revised version number, e.g. "Procedures version 2." The creation date shown in the document footer must also be amended.

The table below must also be updated on the revised version so that there is an audit trail of changes made. The previous version of the procedures should be maintained for a minimum period of 12 months following the change.

Version Control

Date Changed	Version No.	Summary of Change(s)
March 2015	1.0	New procedures
April 2019	2.0	New Procedures

SECTION TWO - INTRODUCTION

Purpose and Objectives

These procedures reflect the controls and processes within Enjay Claims for dealing with complaints.

Enjay Claims' activities are covered by the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA) and complaints relating to these activities fall under its jurisdiction.

What is a complaint?

The definition of a complaint is:

Any expression of dissatisfaction, whether oral or written, and whether justified or not, from or on behalf of a complainant about that business's provision of a regulated claims management service.

Put very simply a complaint is the client not being "happy" or not "satisfied" about something which Enjay Claims did or should have done.

Receipt of a Complaint

Complaints can be received from a number of different sources as follows:

- Verbally – via a telephone call.
- Written – directly from the client either by letter, e-mail or fax.
- Indirectly – from an external source such as a product provider or creditor.

All complaints, either verbal or written, must be investigated and the appropriate action taken.

Enjay Claims' complaints procedures provide the complainant with the opportunity to report his complaint by telephone, letter, email, facsimile and in person.

SECTION THREE - DEALING WITH COMPLAINTS

Complaints Register

All complaints will initially be referred to a director.

Upon receipt of a complaint, the director will add details of the complaint to the Complaints Register (appendix 1). The circumstances of the complaint will be reviewed to determine if the complaint is from an eligible complainant and the line manager will complete the classification details of the complaint in respect of product type, category of complaint and potential redress. At this time, they will also consider if there appear to be any systemic issues and gauge the likely issues with the case.

Categorising the Complaint

The complaint will be categorised in accordance with the following categories:

The categories are:

- Overcharging
- Delays
- Other Admin
- Misleading Advice
- Failure to carry our instructions
- Poor client service
- Misleading advertising
- Disputes over sums/amounts
- Switching/Churning
- Breach of contract
- Arrears handling
- Other

If the complaint falls into more than one category it should be recorded in the category which forms the main part of the complaint.

Acknowledgement of the Complaint

Upon receipt of a complaint, either written or oral, an acknowledgment letter is issued to the client.

- An acknowledgement letter (appendix 2) is to be issued within 5 working days of the receipt of the complaint.
- If any clarification is required in respect of the complaint it should be sought from the client.
- Irrespective of whether the complaint has been made via letter or orally, the acknowledgement letter will state our understanding of the complaint and will invite the complainant to confirm if the statement is incorrect.
- Within the acknowledgment letter, the client is invited to provide details of any meetings and or discussions with the adviser, is requested to provide copies of any paperwork in connection with the complaint and indicate how they would like to see the issues raised being resolved.
- A copy of the "Making a Complaint" leaflet is issued with the acknowledgement letter. (appendix 3).

- The complaints register is updated accordingly to show the date of issue of the acknowledgement letter.

Oral Complaints:

If a client contacts Enjay Claims by phone indicating that he wishes to make a complaint, the individual that takes the initial call will take full details of the complaint, e.g. the client's name and address and general outline of the complaint.

Complaints from a third party on behalf of a complainant

When dealing with a third party about a complaint it will be necessary to obtain a signed letter of authority from the client to enable Enjay Claims to deal with the client's representative.

If a letter of authority has not been received already, one must be sent to the client with the acknowledgement letter, which will ask the client to sign and return the form. Please refer to the sub-section headed "obtaining letters of authority" below.

The investigation can continue pending receipt of the letter of authority. However, no information must be disclosed to a third party until it has been received.

This would mean for example that the final response letter could not be issued to the third party until the authority was received.

As an alternative, the final response letter could be issued to the actual client.

SECTION FOUR – INVESTIGATING THE COMPLAINT

General

When investigating any complaint it is important that the complaints-handler takes a reasonable view based on the balance of probabilities including the relevance of any oral evidence.

This could include for example, consideration of the client's state of health at the time of the sale or event being complained about, or the level of financial awareness or experience the client has, etc.

It is also essential that information is considered from the client's perspective as well as that of the firm's.

All complaints must be dealt with fairly.

This may mean in some instances that a complaint is upheld or redress is made to a client when a strict legal interpretation would not require it, because taking such an approach would not be reasonable or would result in unfairness to the client.

After the reason for the complaint has been established and the investigation has been thoroughly conducted all the evidence will be available to be reviewed.

After reviewing all the evidence the complaints handler will make a decision whether to uphold the complaint or not. The decision and reasons for making the decision need to be recorded on the individual complaint file.

The investigation normally includes:

- a review of the client file in relation to the complaint issues.
- a review of the report received from the staff member.
- a review of product literature for the product in question (where necessary).
- a review of correspondence provided by the client.
- a review of all file notes taken from discussions with any parties to the complaint

It may also be necessary to interview the adviser to progress the investigation of the complaint and clarify particular issues.

Reference should be made to the table overleaf for guidance on the specific areas to be reviewed when investigating the complaint.

However, although these points provide a general approach, they are aimed at providing guidance and it must be remembered that each individual complaint must be investigated on its own merit.

Determining Compensation

In determining whether any compensation is due to the client, consideration should be given to the extent of any omissions for which Enjay Claims is responsible together with relevant guidance issued by the FCA or the Financial Ombudsman Service.

Any calculation of redress must take account of the financial loss suffered by the client. This will be such that it returns the client to the position he would have been in had the advice/action not occurred, together with an addition for interest over the period (usually from the date of advice to the resolution of the complaint).

Financial loss includes consequential or prospective loss, in addition to actual loss. For example, a complaint may involve an allegation that the complainant may suffer financial loss which has not yet crystallised because of the type of product involved.

Calculation of interest should be at a rate of 8%pa simple interest.

If for any reason there has been a delayed payment or part payment of any redress then a further interest payment will be paid to the client (8% pro rata) to cover the time of the delay and to ensure the client is not put at any financial loss.

Consideration should also be given to what additional action is required on the part of Enjay Claims to maintain goodwill with the client and preserve the business relationship, for example this may take the form of an apology.

The Senior Management Decision Letter

Having undertaken a full investigation of the complaint a final response letter or senior management decision letter must be issued to the client which sets out, in a manner that is clear, fair and not misleading, the investigation of the complaint. (see appendix 4).

The letter must be presented in such a way that the client can easily understand how the decision has been reached on his complaint.

The SMD letter must also state:

1. Outcome
 - Whether the complaint has been upheld or rejected.
 - If rejected, the reasons for doing so.
2. Redress
 - The level of any redress or remedial action that is being offered.
3. The Financial Ombudsman Service Referral Rights
 - That if the client remains dissatisfied with the response, he may refer his complaint to the Financial Ombudsman Service.

Other Issues Identified

Whilst investigating a complaint, there may be issues that are highlighted which need to be recorded as a breach, e.g. it appears that the correct sales process has not been followed.

Should the issues identified have a direct impact on the outcome of the complaint the report on the complaint needs to make reference to them.

Where issues are identified which may have an impact on existing Compliance Procedures or Systems and Controls, details must be recorded within the relevant column of the Complaints Register.

When investigating a complaint it is necessary to analyse what the underlying cause of the complaint was.

This is not only to ensure that the issue is corrected and addressed in relation to the particular client but also to ensure that any problems of a wider or recurring nature are resolved.

This analysis should take account of

1. Identifying the root cause of the complaint;
2. Considering whether the root cause may also affect other processes or products, including ones that have not been complained of;
3. Taking action to correct or prevent recurrence of the root cause.

Consideration should also be given to whether any other clients (including those that have not complained) have been affected by the problem.

Where there is an identified root cause, this should be recorded onto the complaints register.

Putting Things Right

After the investigation of the complaint, the decision whether to uphold the complaint or not and the identification of the root cause, it is necessary to take prompt action in respect of any redress or action required.

Action that may be required could include:

Redress payment to the client – ensuring that redress is made promptly
The communication of issues - to relevant individuals within Enjay Claims
Make recommendations - for changes to current practices and procedures.

Completing the Investigation

The 'Complaints Register' is updated accordingly i.e. the date the SMD letter was sent, whether the complaint was upheld or not and the amount of any redress offered.

Where redress is offered, the amount offered is valid for 4 weeks from the date of the 'final outcome letter'.

Timescales

The client must be kept informed of the progress and of the measures being taken to resolve the complaint.

In addition, it is important that the client is aware that their concerns are still being dealt with and they have not been forgotten about.

Enjay Claims will always aim to resolve complaints promptly, however this may not always be possible, if for example historical data is required in order to investigate the complaint.

To ensure that the client is kept informed, if the complaint has not been resolved 4 weeks after receipt, a holding letter (see appendix 5) will be issued, advising the client:

- Of the reasons for the delay and
- Giving an indication of when we hope to be able to respond.

If the complaint has still not been resolved eight weeks after receipt, an eight-week letter will be issued to the client, stating:

- Why Enjay Claims is not yet in a position to provide a final response
- Indicate when the client can expect a final response

The letter will also give relevant referral rights (see appendix 6).

Client's Acceptance of Offer

When any offer is made in full and final settlement of a complaint, the SMD letter incorporates an acceptance statement. A request is made for this statement to be signed and dated by the client and returned to Enjay Claims.

Upon the receipt of a signed acceptance statement, payment should be requested.

Receiving complaints directly from the Financial Ombudsman Service

Enjay Claims may be notified by the Financial Ombudsman Service, via letter, of any complaints that have been referred to it by a client. The register is updated accordingly.

This notification is normally after the issue of the SMD and the client is unhappy with the decision. However, notification may also be received when the investigation has not been concluded within the 8 week period or where the client has gone directly to the Financial Ombudsman Service.

In the latter case, the case should be treated as a new complaint and follow the normal complaints-handling process.

For true referrals, i.e. cases not resolved with 8 weeks and those where the SMD has been issued, an individual reference number is allocated to each case by the Financial Ombudsman Service – this number needs to be used in all correspondence relating to that case.

The Financial Ombudsman Service notification usually includes a request for copies of relevant documentation including the final response letter.

Full co-operation must be given to the Financial Ombudsman Service, including meeting any requests for documentation, adherence to their timescales and complying promptly with any payments or awards in favour of the client.

When the Financial Ombudsman Service has conducted its initial assessment of the file, it will forward a letter with its findings. Details of the outcome of this initial view must be recorded onto the register.

The complaints-handler must review the recommendations made by the Financial Ombudsman Service and action accordingly. If Enjay Claims' view differs to that of the Financial Ombudsman Service then the rationale for this must be communicated to the Financial Ombudsman Service.

Once an agreement has been reached with regards to the outcome of a case, the complaints register is updated accordingly, reflecting the decision of the Financial Ombudsman Service together with any notes for procedural or systems and controls issues.

SECTION FIVE - RECORD KEEPING

General Record Keeping

A computer based register is held for complaints.

A new entry is made within the register upon the receipt of a new complaint.

The register is updated at each appropriate stage during the investigation of a complaint. This is updated at the time any action is taken.

A file note is compiled to support any action(s) taken during the investigation of a complaint that cannot be demonstrated by any other document(s) held on file.

At all times documentation held within the complaint file is filed in chronological order, with the latest documents being filed on top.

Any complaint will be classed as being "closed" in accordance with the following:

- The complainant accepts any offer we make and payment is made.
- If we have received no further response from the client after six months from the date of issue of the SMD
- When the SMD has been issued.

All records are to be kept for a minimum of 18 months from the date of receipt of the complaint.
